To whom it may concern

As a resident living directly above Cocina Familiar, I would have NO objections to the owner being issued with a Licence to sell alcohol. Having lived above the premises since it opened I have no issues with any noise, upset or disagreement in or around the restaurant.

The premises has an allocated number of tables, therefore customers are seated and not blocking other areas.

Customers tend to like a drink with a meal and I can see no problem with having this option.

Anyone coming to collect a takeaway is here for a limited, allocated time and asked to wait in a specific area.

Please feel free to contact me if more information is required.
